The route

Day 1

GLACIER DU TOUR

Ascent to altitude and first steps on glaciers.

Meeting point in the little village of Le Tour. Equipment check and presentation of the tour. From the small ski area, it's easy to reach the impressive glacial moraine. At an altitude of 2702m, discover the comfortable Albert 1er refuge (renovated in 2014) and get to know the glacier. Picnic on the glacier.

Overnight at the Albert 1er refuge (2702 m)

6h walk/ Altitude difference: +950m

Day 2

BLACK TOWER PASS

Glacial hike from the refuge.

Breakfast at the hut, then an early start for the Tête Blanche (3429 m), climbing the whole of the Glacier du Tour. This glacier has few cracks and is gently sloping. Arriving at the col, we discover the vast glacial plateaux on the Swiss side. Picnic on the glacier (or at the Albert 1er refuge), close to the refuge before returning to the village.

7h walk/ altitude difference: -2000m/ +750m

This is an example of a mountaineering program MOUNTAINEERING INITIATION. The weather, snow and mountain conditions, as well as the level of the participants could obligate the guide to modify the program or to take different routes.

The trip

LEVEL ****

Physical level:

The weekly practice of an endurance sport is a good thing. Walking with altitude difference or better, cross-country skiing or hiking, running, swimming. If this is not the case, resuming the sport 2 months before departure (brisk walking then jogging 3 times a week) is essential and will allow you to make the most of your stay.

Technical level:

Learn the basic techniques of mountaineering, in snow and ice and rock. The proposed outings are easy races. Before all our discovery trips, such as glacial hikes, or mountaineering training trips, we must above all be a good hiker, including off-trail, and be broken to walk 6 to 8 hours a day. A sports background is recommendable and the taste of effort is essential to make the most of the days. It is necessary to present oneself rested and fit to any high mountain circuit.

GUIDANCE

State-certified mountain guide. Groups of 5 people maximum.

The guide may at any time modify the itinerary or interrupt the stay of a participant who does not have the level required for his own safety and that of the other participants. In this case, the participant concerned will not be entitled to any refund.

In the event of very bad weather, and to ensure the safety of participants, the course may be cancelled. In this case, we will consider requests for reimbursement on the basis of the number of days spent on the course.
